John will present works by Ortmann, Brahms, Schuman, Debussy, Scriabin, and Chopin, including the latter's Polonaise in A-flat Major and the "Revolutionary" Etude.

John, a physics major, has been studying music for the past eleven years under the capable direction of Otto and Dorothea Ortmann.

Ever since his first complete recital at age 14, John has been the recipient of numerous awards and honors in music. At age 16, John could boast that he was the sole recipient of seven consecutive honorable mentions and seven certificates of national merit from the National Federation of Music Clubs. He has also won two scholarships from the Baltimore Symphony.

Other Accomplishments

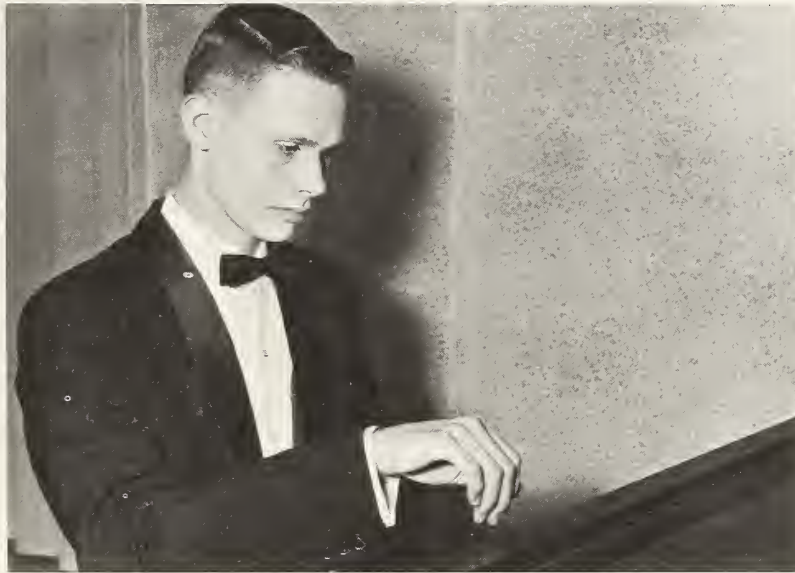

Among his other accomplishments, John has appeared twice with the Gettysburg Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. William Sebastian Hart.

Several Concerts

Last year he has won the Baltimore Symphony's youth talent contest and has appeared with the orchestra as soloist at the Lyric Theater.

John has also played at the International Navigation Congress and at the Governor's mansion at Annapolis and several other occasions.

Also it is expected that Loyola will be honored that evening by the presence of Otto Ortmann, a former director of the Peabody Conservatory of Music and the composer of one of the selections on Mr. Gardecki's program.

CONCERT PIANIST: Loyola senior John Gardecki makes ready for his coming recital. The concert will be sponsored by the Music Club and promises to be an enjoyable experience in music.

Editorial

Day of the Locusts

Less than eight weeks ago, the members of the Freshman Class entered the portals of Loyola for the first time. They were a bewildered group on that first day; afraid of the work that was before them, awed by the rules and regulations which they met, wary of the "knowledgeable" upperclassmen, and a bit proud of themselves for having taken this all-important step towards their future security. They planned to be very successful during their college years: to achieve high grades and become campus leaders.

Today, just thirty-eight short days later, the situation has changed for most of them. The first wave of tests has come and gone, unannounced quizzes have caught some of them napping, and that first big research paper looms somewhere on the horizon. The panic button has been pushed and repushed and that one-time carefree, smiling, curly-headed youth who entered such a short time ago has taken to drinking five cups of coffee at a sitting, smoking cigarettes by the carton, and has, perhaps, begun to notice an increase in the amount of dandruff in his comb and a decrease in the hair which once curled on that proud little forehead. He has become jumpy, irritable, suspicious and is almost certain that he is well on the way to his first ulcer.

This is the life of the true collegian--a hectic life and an uncertain one at best. It is a life which sometimes causes one to wonder at his sanity and to question the advisability of continuing to live in such a rat race. It is an existence which can be as frightening or enjoyable as you yourself can make it. It is your lifenow: Welcome Freshmen. May the bags of wealth which you reap in later life exceed the number of those which you now wear below those "baby-blues" and may you have all of the success in college which you so richly deserve.

P.A.G.

Alpha Sigma Nu's

Are you proud of Loyola College? You should be. The motive of your pride should not be the mere fact that Loyola shall one day be your Alma Mater and, as such, you must stand up for it. Rather your pride should arise from the fact that Loyola is objectively a fine college, an institution of learning of which anyone could be justly proud.

Upon what criteria may Loyola be rated as a fine college? One evident yardstick of a college's worth is the success of its graduates. Numerous Loyola men have distinguished themselves and their Alma Mater in various universities in the U.S. and abroad. Other Loyola

Alumni have made outstanding contributions to the Baltimore community in the civic, industrial, cultural, and religious aspects of life.

In the coming weeks this column, prepared under the auspices of Loyola's Chapter of Alpha Sigma Nu, the National Jesuit Honor Fraternity, will report to you on the accomplishments of Loyola Alumni. We will inform you of the reputation enjoyed by Loyola in Baltimore, the state of Maryland, and beyond. This information should leave little doubt in your mind as to Loyola's worth or the rationality of your pride in your college.

It's A Crazy World

The Skeptic Tank

"Going up in the world," or "Have your ups and downs," or the million other corny jokes that elevator operators are heir to shall not be heard in Maryland Hall. Going up in the world? Just try it in those isolation booths!

Indeed, that's what they are. When those unusually heavy doors roll slowly and ominously closed, one is in between2 worlds. They remind me of the doors on a burial vault rolling shut.

I myself have had no less than 4 dreams about those creatures, dreams too horrible to describe. But they have to do with those thick, heavy doors closing tight--leaving one in airless darkness--alone--I can't stand it, I--I--(sigh) pardon me. Now . . . Oh, yes. Those things are alive, you know. Demons operate them to test students' nerves and patience and ready them for the real thing in the business world. That's right, demons! Just the other day I saw some guy fooling around the motors that run them; and he had several tales. I think they called him Chaucer . . . or was it Wells Fargo?

Anyway, I've seen students vanish into those monsters for days at a time. Big bets are always placed as to how long it will take to get to the selected floor!

There's usually a 5-minute wait for the car. You get in and right away, it goes down. But you want to go up. It stops, and people get in. It goes up, right to where you were. People get out. You press the floor button, and it goes up, up, up--past the one you picked. Doors open, and no one is there. Before you think to push the button again, it goes down. Ad infinitum.

Some students have begun to tell stories while en route to their floor to pass the time. Well, like someone said, it's really just the novelty of taking an elevator to class.

Now, if we were co-ed, I could see the picture much clearer. I found a button that stops the car between floors!

The Reviewing Stand

"Waltz of the Toreadors" frankly puzzles me. It is a strange mixture of farce and serious drama. Like the Jean Anouilh play from which it is adapted, the film tries to capture the schizophrenic quality of life, i.e., the perplexing proximity of real tears and hard laughter. I am told the viewer's appreciation of this satire ripens with age. If this be so, I am still in the budding stage.

The film opens at a sprightly clip as a circa 1900 coach clatters into a quiet English hamlet of the same period; the coach stops and out steps a beautiful and mysterious lady. Simultaneously, dear old General Fitzjohn (Peter Sellers) is retiring amidst pomp and circumstance. Throughout the ceremony and ensuing scenes the general displays an interested eye toward all the fair young maidens. The prancing pace is maintained as the general gallops back to his manor, and along the way, taking the time to charge through a flock of sheep, like an Anglo-Saxon Don Quixote. Even throughout his roguish entrance at the manor, he eyes and pinches the scullery maids; the film rolls merrily along. Then come overtones of serious drama.

This counter tone is established in several scenes; e.g., the one which introduces the general's wife, Emily (Margaret Leighton) as a slightly uncomic shrew and a definitely unhilarious hypochondriac; or the one in which the general's character is amplified and he is seen doting on dreams of the past and softened by self-pity. After these revelations, the dilemma occurs when the beautiful and mysterious lady appears as the general's extramarital amour, Ghislaine (Dany Robin), who has been constant and virginal in a seventeen year affair with him, and wishes to end his procrastination and her maidenhood.

In the general's farcical attempts to battle the circumstances and fantastical recollections of military glory, dazzling balls, and unfulfilled promises of undying love, the film purports to carry a bitter message, viz., to attack the futility of dreams and portray the petty meanness of life. And it would succeed were it not for the film's preoccupation in the low comedy which farce allows; too often vaudevillian humor intrudes into the film's sense and unity. Consequently, instead of a clever and brutal juxtaposition of farce and drama, the film seems a sometimes extraneous and at times tedious combination of sentimentality and slapstick. The situation is, as Sellers says in one scene, "like a fantastic flight to the moon." And indeed, the film is a sad piece of lunacy. ("Waltz of the Toreadors" is now playing at both the Little and the Aurora.)

Also a slew of great shows opened this week: Requiem For A Heavyweight at the Town, and A Kind of Loving at the Playhouse.

Special Report:Loyola's Peace Corps Members

"For Loyola College, the Peace Corps has a personal dimension; two of our students, Miss Helen M. Rupp of the Evening Division and Bernard Zubrowski '62, have already begun their service as Peace Corps Volunteers, and a third, Vic Corbin '62, has been called to report for training," announced Dr. Nicholas Varga, the Peace Corps liaison on campus. "Bernie Zubrowski left recently for Chittagong College in East Pakistan where he will be teaching chemistry. Vic Corbin, I understand, will be going eventually to Costa Rica.

Direct View

Miss Rupp, an alumna of Seton High and St. Joseph's, took a number of history and political science courses in the Evening Division from 1957 to 1961. When President Kennedy called for volunteers, she secured a leave-of-absence from Armco Steel, where she was employed as a secretary. She was sent to the University of Nigeria, Nsukka. There Miss Rupp has been teaching courses in typing, business English, bookkeeping, and the like to employees of the Nigerian Government.

"I thought some of the students might be interested in a direct view of Peace Corps work, so I asked Miss Rupp for a description of her experiences. She responded with a very interesting letter; here, let me read it to you," said Dr. Varga.

"... It's very difficult to know exactly where to begin by way of explanation. However, since most Americans realize the genuine desire of the newly emerging nations to advance as rapidly as possible and the consequent assistance that P.C.V.'s can lend, I should emphasize the mutual gain to America as well as the individual P.C.V.'s, in such an effort.

After an eight-week training course at Michigan State University, thirty of us (17 fellows and 13 girls) arrived here at the University of Nigeria, Nsukka, in November of last year. At the end of the term in June, before digging into our summer assignments (all P.C.V.'s receive 2½ days vacation for each month's service) several of us decided to visit the town of Akugbene.

A Rewarding Experience

As one who has benefited personally and seen the tremendous benefit to the host country, I can't think of another undertaking where both parties stand to gain so much. To express my convictions frankly, I would go so far as to say that it is the tremendous step in the direction of fostering international harmony and understanding, which is long overdue. In addition, an individual could hardly experience a more rewarding and stimulating two years than those spent in the Peace Corps..."

Dr. Varga went on to say, "A representative from the Washington office of the Peace Corps is supposed to be on campus November 14 with a film about the work of the Corps. The government wants the chance to explain the program to the public. Of course, it would like to prompt the interested students to volunteer."

LIEUTENANT JOHN MONTEFUSCO, HISTORY MAJOR, CLASS OF '61

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?"

My wife and I are in Panama at the moment. She likes it. You know, Officers' Club, dances—that sort of thing. I like it, too. But whether I stay in the Army or not, the question is: Would I take Army R.O.T.C. if I had it to do over again? Yes, I certainly would. In spades, I didn't realize how lucky I was. At the time I figured: Okay, so I'll get my degree—get an Army commission, too, and pick up some extra money along the way! I wasn't the leadership type, I thought. I was wrong. Boy, was I wrong! Looking back on it, I wouldn't trade the leadership training I got for anything! Take my word for it, leaders are made—not born! Whether I stay in the Army or not, nobody can take away what I've learned. And let's face it, where can anybody my age step out of college and walk into a standard of living this good? Look, if you have already invested two years in college ROTC, take it from me: Stick it out! It'll be one of the smartest things you ever did. I say so."

THE DEFENDERS: Hound booters Paul Cashour and John Campbell team to defend against a possible score. The Hound defense has looked razor-sharp against all comers, this year.

Cage News

All basketball tickets go on sale today at the athletic office. This includes student season tickets (which will be distributed free of charge) and all invitational tournament tickets.

Nap Doherty's cagers have two intra-squad scrimmages under their belts. Although rough and disorganized in spots, the two long, full-court tilts gave evidence of much improvement in individual players. The lightning-fast break combination of O'Donnell, Maher, and Wallenhorst was particularly impressive, as was the spectacular leaping and shooting of sophomore Pat Flynn. Senior Captain Charlie O'Donnell appears to be in top physical condition and ready to direct the Greyhounds for the third straight year. Wallenhorst, fastest Hound in a very fast pack, is rugged under the boards. Marty Maher continues to display the hustle and court savvy that made him outstanding as a freshman last year. One of the most improved players is sophomore Mike McCarthy. Awkward as a freshman last year, Mike has developed new moves and shots that will enable him to see considerable action this year. Phil Potter is shooting and rebounding well and is a top candidate for a forward spot along with junior Bill Carew. Alex Cummings, possessor of a deadly left-handed jump shot and Billy Morris, a cool headed, rugged ball player are strong back court possibilities. Steve Bogusky, a fine all around ball player with a great shooting eye, will be a great asset to the team once he trims down to his playing weight.

Freshmen

The Freshman basketball team has begun practice coach Nap Doherty announced. The nine boys who make up the team are Tom Brown, Gerard Fromm, Mike Gomsak, Bill Grewe, Charles Laurence, Bob Lister, Mike O'Brien, Tom Ruane, and Larry Stevenson.

Schedule

Among the teams on the Frosh Hounds' schedule are Jewish Community Center, Baltimore Institute, Bullis Prep, Mt. St. Joe, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Hopkins, and Md.

The first of the twelve-game schedule will be played on Dec. 1, against Jewish Community Center.

X-Country Team Invades Towson

With their record at 1-3 as a result of their loss, 22-37, to Hopkins, the Hound harriers have been girding themselves for their last two dual meets of the season--Towson State and Mt. St. Mary's. In the Hopkins game, Denny Voith, finished third; Bill Jenkins, fifth, and Tom Kenney, seventh, and were the only Hounds in the first ten.

Tomorrow the Hounds meet Towson State on the Teachers' home grounds. Although the "Mac-Men" have not overwhelmed anyone this year, they could very well romp home against The Teachers. Since the meet will be held during the half time of the soccer game, there should be some Loyolans on hand for the afternoon's sport. Let's root our Hounds home--first.

Mt. St. Marys

On next Tuesday, Nov. 6, the harriers play host to Loyola's No. 1 rival in everything--Mt. St. Mary's. Last year the harriers were hard on a lot of people, including the Mount, and, although they have not been spectacular this year, Tuesday's meet could be the best of the season. Loyola teams and fans always seem to pull out all the stops against the Mount. This year's harriers are like all Loyola teams. How about the Loyola fans?

Let's show our sportsmen that we can stay behind them all the way and all of the time. By doing this, we will not only aid in building the morale of our team members but also in building a name for Loyola College.

SWIM NOTES

The Greyhound swimmers have started their regular practices and are now briskly preparing for the coming season. Time trials will be held soon and all the natators and especially the Freshmen and other new candidates are pointing toward this.

Green and Gray

Coach Bill Klarner has scheduled his annual Green and Grey intra-squad meet for November 14. This meet will be one of the deciding factors in determining the swimmers who will make up the starting team. The first regular meet will be held on December 7 against Seton Hall.

Booters Gain Victories Over W. Md. & Lynchburg

The Loyola soccer team rolled to their sixth and seventh victories without a defeat last week as they beat Western Maryland and Lynchburg Colleges. The Hounds topped the Green Terrors of Western Maryland last Tuesday by a four to zero count. Denny Grabowski opened the scoring with a penalty shot early in the game. Sophomore Jack Palmer netted the second Loyola goal just before the first quarter ended. Denny Grabowski got two more goals in the third quarter to put the game on ice for the Hounds. He made one on a pass from Sam Amato and the other on a tremendous head shot from ten feet out in front. Last Saturday, the Greyhounds played Lynchburg College and the boys from Virginia gave us one of our toughest games of the year. Denny Grabowski scored one goal and Captain Joe Kosiorek accounted for the other Hound goal in our two to zero victory. The defensive work of Mike Elliott, Harry Bregal, Sam Amato, and John Campbell was outstanding.

Standings

As this paper goes to press the Hounds are out in front in the standings in the Northern Division of the Mason Dixon Conference with four games yet to be played. Four victories would give our booters sole possession of the championship due to the fact that Baltimore U. the only other team in contention plays only five league games.

Certainly, if any players would have to be singled out for his great record, Denny Grabowski and Paul Cashour would be the ones. Denny, last year's Greyhound scoring leader, has booted in fifteen goals to lead not only the Hounds but also the league. Paul has allowed only four goals in eight games, also good for the league leadership.

All in all, it looks as if the booters, as a team, has been playing much brighter ball this year than they have in the past.

Intramurals

Intramural Football activity was once again heavy last week as five games were scheduled. Favorite choices are now being made, since several of the teams have been eliminated and some remain undefeated.

The Debts still remain undefeated and the team to beat as they defeated the 1.5's 16-2. Quarterback John Zdenek accounted for most of the scoring as he lofted touchdown passes to Nosker and Connely. The 1.5's got their only score on a safety.

Other action saw four teams being eliminated by virtue of their second defeat. The Hawks forfeited their game to the Pershing Rifles and the Flores defeated the Sharks 19-6. Joe Kernan led the offense for the Flores and was ably aided by the pass receiving of Coyle and Bill Kammer. Mike Longo's accurate tosses for the Sharks went for naught, though, as his teammates just could not handle the ball.

The Flores also eliminated the Hummers by a score of 19-6. Joe Kernan again led the offense, pitching two scores to Jim Coyle and another to Jack Lambdin.

The final game saw the Pershing Rifles also gain their second triumph of the week. Led offensively by Lacey and Rossi, and defensively by the interceptions of Bill Hiedel, the Rifles scored an impressive 21-0 win over the Dirty Dozen.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

by Tom Kenney

This season's Hound soccer team is the best in Loyola history. As this paper goes to press, the booters have played eight games, winning seven and fighting powerful Baltimore U. to a 1-1 tie in the remaining contest. On the way to this outstanding record, Loyola has compiled some eye-opening statistics. The stingy Hound defense has allowed its opponents only four goals in the eight games. On the offensive side of the ledger Loyola has poured twenty-nine goals into the enemy nets. Thus, the Hounds have averaged better than 3½ goals per game while allowing the opposition an average of ½ a goal per game.

Tomorrow, the Hounds will play Towson State at Towson in a game the boosters really want to win. The Towson game is always a tough one. This season it will be even rougher than usual because tomorrow is Towson's homecoming game. Five thousand State boosters are expected to be on hand, doing their best to fire up the Towson squad. I doubt if we could round up five thousand Hound rooters by tomorrow but I'll bet that five hundred Loyola fans could out-shout the Towsonites. Let's find out. Be at the Towson campus tomorrow to help our booters chalk up another win.

Coach McElroy
